BRITAIN FALLING APART

- Economic collapse
- Anarchy in the streets
- Crime going through the roof
- Paralysis in government

RIOTING MOBS took control of the streets in several towns and cities in Britain last month with little serious attempt made to stop them, let alone bring them to book. In Bristol, Blackburn, Burnley, Huddersfield, Leeds, Luton and Peckham (South East London) mayhem overcame large areas. Police 'action' in these conflagrations amounted to scarcely more than containing operations. The number of actual arrests made was tiny by comparison with the scale of the disorder.

Meanwhile, anarchy of a different kind came to Central Wales during July when a mob of drug-crazed degenerates, estimated at some 10,000, descended on a peaceful country area, where they traded freely in narcotics, created indescribable filth around them and let their dogs attack and kill local farmers' sheep, For most of the time of their presence, police stood back and did nothing.

On the economic front, Britain is lapsing ever deeper into slump. Unemployment is rocketing upwards. Businesses are going bust in record numbers. The bottom is falling out of the housing market. Yet interest rates remain impossibly high, so that the money simply is not there for business to get moving again.

At the centre of all this stands a paralysed government — incapable of taking firm action to generate economic health as it is of restoring order in the many areas of the country where mob rule has taken over.

What all this amounts to is simply that Britain is falling apart. Chaos reigns in the towns, in the countryside and in the economy. To this could be added chaos in education, in defence policy, in local government and indeed in politics at the highest level.

It is increasingly said that Britain is becoming ungovernable. So it is — as long as the old system prevails and the old gang remain in power. Only new men, a new system and a new creed can create order out of the chaos.

WHAT ARE THEY AFRAID OF?

ANYONE would have thought that in allegedly 'free' and 'democratic' Britain the principle of scientific enquiry and unhindered public debate in any field ought to be sacred. This, we have always been told, is the only way to the truth, and in a democracy truth is always supposed to come first. It is only those nasty totalitarians, like one-time German propaganda minister Joseph Goebbels, who, they say, are in the habit of trying to suppress the truth. Nothing like this could possibly happen in Britain, could it? After all, didn't we fight two world wars in the cause of 'freedom'?

One man who might tell you otherwise is British historian David Irving. Ironically, Mr. Irving, probably the world's foremost authority on German Government documents from the Nazi period, recently came under concerted attack from a number of influential quarters for his stand on behalf of unfettered historical research and public debate on its findings.

Recently, Mr. Irving called a seminar in Central London. This was to discuss one of the most vexed questions of the 1939-45 war — the so-called 'holocaust'. Mr. Irving is one of those who, after exhaustive research into the subject, has come to the conclusion that this 'holocaust' never in fact happened in the way that is claimed by conventional historians.

Of course, there will be many who will hotly dispute his findings. They are entitled to do so, just as he is entitled to put forward his point of view on such matters. After all, isn't Britain a 'democracy'?

Also, if democratic traditions are to be observed, those who dispute Mr. Irving should oppose him with arguments and facts, not merely with personal attacks.

But instead, disorderly demonstrations by left-wing students, Jewish militants, homosexuals, dreadlocked squatters and other self-styled 'anti-nazis' were organised outside both Mr. Irving's London home and the hall where the seminar was being held next day. During these demonstrations there were several attacks on the police.

In the background, the media, led by Lord Sieff's so-called Independent newspaper, were giving aid and comfort to the mobs with a chorus of anti-Irving abuse. When the historian was subjected to a cowardly assault a few days later, Sun newspaper hack Richard Littlejohn, in a silly tirade of hysterical insults against him, barely stopped short of approving his attackers.

In addition to this, it is known that a deputation from the Jewish Board of Deputies made a strong appeal to the Home Secretary to place an entry ban on two speakers from the United States who were booked to appear at the Irving seminar. In this case, the speakers were not banned but in another case last November the American Fred Leuchter was arrested in London when giving a talk on a related subject, namely his claim that no gas chambers existed at the Auschwitz concentration camp. He was subsequently deported.

The mask of 'tolerance' worn until now by the powers that be in our society is starting to slip — when this is their response to a reasoned appeal for a reasoned debate — whether such a debate is over historical issues, as in Mr. Irving's case, or over any other matters of public interest and concern.

We have got to put to these people the simple question: what are they afraid of?

THE NATION'S CRISIS AND OUR ANSWER

WHEN we survey national affairs today the overwhelming impression that strikes us is that of the complete paralysis of government.

When voters elect politicians to office they do so in the expectation that those elected will give leadership to the nation in every field: in the activation of the economy; in the maintenance of law and order and the public peace; in the organisation and administration of vital services; in the upkeep of national defences; in the mobilisation of all national resources, human and otherwise, to the achievement of national betterment.

When problems emerge, the people expect that their elected leaders will grapple with them manfully and with intelligence and determination, not sit back throwing their hands in the air and lamenting their occurrence as if they were some kind of freak of nature, beyond human control.

Yet the latter is the condition to which we have become accustomed under both the present Government and its predecessors ever since the end of the last World War.

The British economy is set on a downward spiral through recession, to slump and finally towards complete collapse. Yet the measures needed to revive it lie fully within our capacity — if only there were government with the will to take them.

The money necessary to activate the economy could be created by a simple act of government and fed into the economy debt-free at a rate calculated in accordance with estimated growth potential. In the meantime, bank and building society lending rates could be vastly reduced by bringing Britain out of the European Exchange Rate Mechanism (REM) and placing a halt on the flow of all investment capital out of Britain. Yet government will not act.

Unemployment could be wiped out in a short time by this practice — allied to the equally simple practice of introducing progressively declining import quotas while British industry was built up to produce the goods we presently buy from abroad. By Japanese-style economic nationalism we could find work for all by making it a rule that nothing will be imported which we have the resources and the skills to make in Britain. Yet government will not act.

Government will not act because government is enslaved to the forces of high finance, which stand to lose by the reforms needed. High finance is international, while the measures called for are essentially national. Under the present political system finance inevitably rules government rather than government, as should be, ruling finance.

ANARCHY

In a multitude of other areas of the nation's life the same absence of resolute government opens the way to chaos and anarchy.

Crime is going through the roof. Mob rule stalks the streets, as recent outbreaks of disorder in a number of our towns and cities, and even in the countryside, bear testimony.

Last month serious riots broke out on housing estates in Bristol, Blackburn, Burnley, Huddersfield and South London. Cars were set on fire. Petrol bombs were thrown at police. Widespread looting took place. In Mid-Wales a gang of 10,000 so-called 'travellers', mostly comprising the absolute scum of society, pitched camp in a rural area. They proceeded to engage in drug-peddling; they allowed their dogs to attack and kill local farmers' sheep. They stole from local residents. All the time they kept up a deafening noise, while their mostly unwashed bodies created the most unwholesome stink. Hardly any of them work for a living; almost all of them are kept on social security. They made life hell for local folk for several days, as well as causing damage worth many thousands.

The British people, says JOHN TYNDALL, are sick of weak government and yearn for the emergence of leadership that will put an end to anarchy

And yet they are allowed to get away with it!

Angry residents protested to the police to arrest or remove them, but the police did next to nothing.

Just as law-abiding people in the riot areas of the towns and cities looked to the police to round up the rioters and put them out of harm's way. But the police did next to nothing.

A new philosophy seems to have taken over in policing operations: it might be called the philosophy of 'containment'. It is a philosophy which almost certainly has been handed down to police chiefs from those in government. In any confrontational situation emerging between police and law-breakers the imperative that seems to prevail above all else is the avoidance of violence, which has clearly taken precedence over the enforcement of the law. If the law cannot be enforced without violence, it should not be enforced at all. This is the lesson that has come down to us from Blackburn, Huddersfield, Mid-Wales and elsewhere. Hooligan elements come to believe they can get away with almost anything — and who is to say that they are not right?

WHY THE 'UNDERCLASS'?

But there are deeper reasons for what is wrong. Why is society producing so many of these hooligans, spongers and drifters in the first place? Why are we breeding an ever larger criminal population. A word in vogue at the moment is 'underclass'. So why the uncontrolled rise in this 'underclass'?

The great and the good — the 'liberals' of parliament and press — talk of unemployment being a cause. Well, there were plenty of unemployed in the Thirties and they didn't riot, loot and attack the police. The same people talk of the depressing environment of the post-war housing estates. Well, these are not the pleasantest places to live, but many of our grandparents lived in places much worse and they didn't riot, loot and attack the police either.

Unemployment and a squalid environment are both symptoms of bad government, and are both unnecessary. But neither of them fully explain why law and order are collapsing in the way that is happening. The truth is that, above all else, society is producing more and more of the wrong kinds of people. If we are going to tackle this problem, we are going to have to go to the very root of things.

What moulds such people, especially the young people who constitute the majority of those causing the problems? There are numerous answers. One is family life (or lack of it). Another is education (or lack of it). Yet another is the influence of the mass media. All these factors are contributing to the breeding of an ever-growing population of misfits and unemployables.

Yet what is government for — if it is not for taking the measures necessary to rectify the wrongs in these institutions. In the last analysis, it is government where "the buck stops." If by the action of government such wrongs cannot be righted, by what on earth other measures or agencies can they be righted?

Some well-meaning people have highlighted the decline in religion and the disappearance of moral values. True enough. But again, it falls to government to take the action necessary to build a healthy moral climate, held together by values in which the bulk of the people believe. If some say: "Wrong — it is for the church to do this," I would reply: But who is it that determines who heads the church? Who else but those in government?

MOB RULE
This was the scene in Blackburn last month when hooligan gangs, in this case almost entirely comprised of Asians, brought terror to the streets for several days and nights. The police (seen in riot gear in the foreground) did no more than fight a containing operation. Despite the violence and disorder, very few arrests were made.

MORAL SICKNESS

Millions will not dispute that Britain today is in the grip of an all-engulfing moral sickness, of which the phenomena we have looked at are but mere symptoms.

But part of the sickness, which so many of those millions will not yet recognise, is a lack of appreciation that only a revolution in government — in our system of government and in the calibre of men and women who exercise government — can result in the restoration of health.

As things are at present, not only are the institutions and procedures of government inadequate to the task of overhauling our society and weeding out its rotten elements, occupying the seats of government are people of a type who would be incapable of the necessary action even were the right institutions and procedures at their disposal.

Take a look at the faces, and listen to the voices, of those who today command the highest offices in government and the state. In every sound and gesture, in every expression of the eyes and every set of the mouth, they exude a weakness and a flabbiness that preclude any firm resolve to grapple with anything. If a government minister gets caught out cheating on his wife by bedding a playgirl, blinks at the subsequent exposure and furore as if nothing had happened, and then declines to take the honourable course by resigning his office, is this not what we should all be conditioned to expect when we consider the stamp and kind of public servant that the system elevates to the highest political rank? Is this not the norm in a body politic which presides over a decadent and putrid national life without lifting a finger in anger to change it?

To reduce the matter to the simplest terms, what we are witnessing is a society blighted by the collapse of authority. And what we need, before all else, is a movement in Britain that is prepared to stand and work for the resurgence of authority. Without this, all is lost.

THE FALLACIES OF 'DEMOCRACY'

At the moment, instead of a recognition of the need for authority to prevail, there is only a repetition of the familiar incantations and whinings about 'rights', and the crowing about a 'freedom' that is pure illusion when it comes down to the power of ordinary people to influence the decisions which affect their lives. Mr. Citizen at election time has a choice between two or three candidates and parties who, when they enter parliament, will proceed to vote and legislate in olympian contempt for him and all he believes in. Yet by a corruption of the language and a sly manipulation of his reasoning processes he is persuaded that the establishment of a power able to govern, and comprised of people fit for governing, will somehow entail a violation of liberties with which by the grace and favour of 'democracy' he is mysteriously endowed. What a pathetic fallacy he lives under — as he will soon find if he ever starts to challenge seriously the oligarchy and interests to which he has become enslaved!

REDEFINING GOVERNMENT

The crisis into which Britain is now plunged calls for many new policies in a wide variety of fields.

But before we can even think about implementing the policies that are required we must first recognise the need for a fundamental review of the whole nature and role of government.

First, we must devise a mechanism to ensure that the offices of government are occupied by people of a type wholly superior to those presently in occupation of them — superior in intell-

The way to get down interest rates and get the economy moving

THROUGHOUT BRITAIN, industry is in decline, businesses are going bankrupt in record numbers, the property market is in slump and more and more families are having their homes repossessed because of inability to meet their mortgage repayments — and all because of government policies that are totally unnecessary.

At the centre of the trouble lies the grossly inflated lending rate, which under the present system is keeping the economy starved of money. Why must this lending rate be so high? And why must the lending rate anyway govern the health of the economy as it does?

To the first question Chancellor Lamont gives us two answers. To begin with, banks and building societies in Britain must charge high interest for loans in order to be able to pay high interest on deposits. Why is the latter necessary? Simply because if depositors do not get high rates here they will take their money abroad. But this is the case only because Britain's financial system is tied in with the international financial system. The British Government could in fact solve this this problem in a stroke. The first necessary measure would be to act to prevent British investors moving their money out of this country except in specific cases where this was justified by the national interest. As long as there is free movement of capital about the world, investment is going to gravitate towards whatever country yields the highest return.

British Government needs to bring Britain out of this system and harness all financial forces in this country to the needs of the British economy itself, in particular the manufacturing sector.

The second answer that the Chancellor would give, and has given, is that interest rates must remain high so as to keep down inflation. It is high time that this argument was properly and carefully examined.

MEANING OF INFLATION

The classic economist's definition of inflation is that that condition occurs when the amount of extra money flowing into an economy exceeds the rise in the creation of real wealth, i.e. of solid material assets of monetary value.

Contrary to present financial 'orthodoxy', it is perfectly acceptable for a government to 'print' money — just as long as that tendency is avoided, in other words when the money printed is matched by real wealth creation.

Inflation does not have to occur when money is lent and borrowed. A proper lending and borrowing transaction is one in which money is simply transferred from one holder to another holder. Under proper conditions, that does not amount to a rise in the amount of money entering the economy and it should not therefore of itself be inflationary.

So why is Mr. Lamont telling us that interest rates must be kept high to discourage borrowing, because more borrowing will result in inflation? Is he correct?

LAMONT
His hands are tied by the power of international finance

Answer: he is correct as long as the present system works as it does. Under this system, banks are in fact 'lending' money many times in excess of the actual financial assets they have available.

So does this mean that it is the banks that are actually 'printing' money? That is exactly what it means; banks have taken over the prerogative of government to issue the nation's money, and they are issuing it as 'loans' that have to be repaid at interest!

It means that when the banks 'lend' money they are not, as supposed, merely transferring it from one holder to another; they are creating NEW MONEY!

No wonder Mr. Lamont is saying that borrowing must be curbed in order to keep down inflation. As long as lending and borrowing take place in this way they are bound to be inflationary.

So what is the solution? The solution simply is to restore to government the prerogative it exercised for centuries before the present system was introduced: that of being the sole creator of the nation's money.

And to rule that that money will be created by government, not as an interest-bearing debt, but as a free gift to the economy assessed in accordance with the rise of the gross national product as measured in real wealth.

A British National Party Government, if placed in the position of the present Tory Government, would make a careful assessment of what new national wealth could be produced in a year putting to work many hundreds of thousands of people presently on the dole and getting running the machinery of the many thousands of factories now lying idle. It would then simply print the money necessary to enable those workers to be paid and to get those factories operational. Within less than a year a vast increase in the national product would result.

It could then be calculated whether this increase was equal to the extra money printed. If it were not, the rate of money printed could be reduced; if it were more than equal, that rate could be increased. By these regular calculations and adjustments, any inflationary tendency could be avoided. By the action of government, a method for the funding of the economy would be adopted that was non-inflationary. The money to get industry moving again could be easily created. All that it requires is an act of will by the nation's leadership.

GOVERNMENT ENSLAVED TO HIGH FINANCE

Why is that will not forthcoming at present? Surely those in government must be aware that the thing can be done, and that it would be electorally popular.

They do. And it would. But the problem is that government under the present system is a slave to high finance. Political parties are funded by high finance. Their leaders are 'bought' by high finance. They operate within a system under which the 'public opinion' which decides elections is controlled by the mass media, which are themselves the tools of high finance. Government — even if it is a 'socialist' government — will not dream of taking action which offends its overlords and paymasters.

So that is why we are stuck with a recession when all the means to create a boom are at our disposal — if only we were to use them!

What we'd do with roving hippie mobs

A GOOD DOSE OF ARMY-STYLE DISCIPLINE IS WHAT THESE PARASITES NEED

ULTIMATE FARCE was reached last month when a mobile section of the social security department of Kerry, in Mid-Wales, set itself up on the site of a hippie camp in order to hand out payments to a crowd of useless bums, junkies and drug-pushers who had taken occupation of the area a few days previously.

This foul-smelling, unwashed rabble descended on a peaceful Powys farming community during the last week in July. For several days they made themselves a thorough nuisance to the locals, causing some farmers considerable losses by allowing their dog's to savage the farmers' sheep. They parked themselves on private land to which they had no right whatever, but by some strange technicality in the law the police felt indisposed to move them until near the end of their jamboree, when they had caused thousands of pounds worth of damage. Although drug-dealing was rife throughout the occupation, police made no efforts to go in and arrest the pushers — no doubt because they had received instructions to the contrary from those on high. Anarchy prevailed in a part of the United Kingdom, just as it had done a short time previously when a similar collection of human flotsam and jetsam descended on Castlemorton, in Worcestershire, not so far away.

Not only do we allow this garbage to go roaming around the country making themselves at home wherever it pleases them to do so, we even pay them to do it! Almost all of them are living on social security, although it is quite clear that hardly any of them have the slightest intention of finding honest work. In a final display of capitulation by the authorities, trestle tables were set up on the camp site so that the pampered darlings could collect their cheques (paid for by us, the taxpayers) instead of having to perform the strenuous chore of going to the appropriate offices.

THE ULTIMATE FARCE
Mobile social security office is set up to serve down-and-outs at Mid-Wales hippie camp

An everyday story of Great Britain 1992!

THE CORRECT TREATMENT

So what would a BNP Government do if confronted by a situation such as this? We would have no doubt about what to do. First, these unwashed cretins would have their children taken away from them and into care, so that those children may be brought up in a decent environment in which they would be properly educated and taught civilised behaviour. The parents would be able to reclaim the children only after they had given firm evidence that they had changed their ways.

Next, the young men among them would be conscripted into the armed forces, as would all males of their age-group. Where necessary, the drug-takers among them would be forced to admit to compulsory detoxification — it is unlikely that they would be able to get their hands on drugs anyway, as dealing in that commodity would carry the sentence of death, just as it does in some countries in the Far East. They would also be forced to take a good bath, and thereafter regular baths or showers at least three times a week.

They would be subjected to rigorous discipline and extensive military training, and they would undergo courses of re-education by which, it would be hoped, many of them would be persuaded to change their lifestyle completely. They would also partake in thrice-weekly PE periods that would be hard and tough, making them, probably for the first time in their lives, physically fit.

If, after their period of military service, they were found not to have learned the lessons that had been imparted to them, and decided to return to their old ways, they would soon find that handouts from the state would not be available unless they joined labour batallions, set up on similar military lines, through which they would be employed on various schemes of public works. Payments would then be made to them for work done, but with the condition that part of these could be docked in cases of indiscipline.

The females among them would be drafted into similar labour battalions organised for people of their sex and performing work schemes suitably chosen. The same rules of discipline

CHINESE TAKEAWAY!

How Britain's industrial assets are being stripped as British workers are thrown on the dole

AS Britain's economy sinks ever deeper into the mire of recession and more British workers are thrown on the unemployment scrapheap, oriental coolies are being invited into one of the nation's most depressed areas to cart off, piece by piece, a whole factory for reassembly in the Far East.

Chinese workers, paid a pound a week by the bosses of Red China's Chengdu seamless steel tube company, have been stripping the former British Steel-owned Clydesdale Tube-works in Lanarkshire. This plant employed 1,200 steelworkers until closure in April last year.

To rub salt in the wounds, the Chinese are getting the plant at a knock-down price. They are being charged just £3 million by British Steel for a plant worth some £25 million. The chiefs of Britain's steel industry — or what is left of it — say that the plant, installed in 1985 to turn out the only seamless tubes made in this country, which were produced for the North Sea oil industry, is now "too old-fashioned" for the European market.

OPERATING UNDER COVER
A group of Chinese workers engaged in the dismantling of Clydesdale Tubeworks. They've been ordered not to have contact with locals in order to keep their job secret. Note one of them trying to shield his face from the camera.

SECRETIVE OPERATION

The operation has been a secretive, hole-in-the-corner affair. As far as possible, the Chinese workers have been kept out of the public gaze in a back-street local lodging house, where they live on a bowl of porridge a day. British Steel has largely washed its hands of the affair, refusing to comment and saying that the removal of the plant to China is now solely a matter for the Chinese company concerned.

In this, the chiefs of the British steel industry are at one with the British Government, which has allowed things to come to this as a matter of deliberate policy. It is being openly stated that Scotland's steel industry, like that of the rest of Britain, is doomed. No doubt, as things stand this will be so.

But if it is, this is not because Britain doesn't need steel. It is because the City of London and the international financial fraternity that dominates it, for whose benefit the British economy is run, find it more profitable to invest in the coolie labour of the Far East, whose cheap product can then be sold at an extravagant mark-up both on world markets in general and in Britain's home market in particular. If this means that British workers are out of a job because they're regarded as too expensive by comparison with the coolies, then as far as the Government and the City are concerned that is just too bad!

The Clydesdale plant is to be shipped to China so that the massive iron ore deposits of the South China Sea can be exploited. City finance will no doubt be in on this large-scale operation and profit accordingly. But Britain itself most certainly doesn't stand to be a winner.

'TRAGEDY FOR SCOTLAND'

The Scottish National Party's spokesman on steel, Ian Lawson, went some way towards expressing inevitable local feelings when he said: "This is a tragedy for Scotland. Imagine selling off one of the jewels of the Scottish steel industry to provide employment on the other side of the world."

True. But Mr. Lawson's party has no more answers to this state of affairs than have the rest of the Westminster gang, all of whom have over the years stood back as international money has run down Britain for its own profit. The SNP stands for a separate Scottish mini-state that would be powerless in the face of big world finance. In any case, the destruction of Scottish steel is only part of the general ruin engulfing the steel industry and other

WHAT ABOUT THESE RACIAL ATTACKS?

White-on-black crimes are greeted by wails and howls about 'racism', but black-on-white ones are just described as 'mindless'

JUST OVER A YEAR AGO, black youth Rolan Adams was killed by some young Whites in South London's Thamesmead area in the course of a gang fight, which appears to have been about territory. Police made it plain at the time that there was no racial motive.

This did not stop the fanatics of the 'Black Power' lobby screaming blue murder to the contrary. They even imported overweight black militant the 'Reverend' Al Sharpton from New York to lead a march through the mainly white suburbs of South East London pointing the finger at local Britons as if they were somehow collectively guilty of Adams' death and denouncing them for their 'racism'.

Nor did it stop large sections of the media trying to martyrise Adams as some sort of 'victim' of white society. This continued even after the trial of those accused of Adams' killing, in which prosecution counsel was at pains to deny, like the police, that the motive was racial. Although the judge allowed that the case had what he called ''racial overtones.''

SILENCE OVER WHITE DEATH

The loud-mouthed caterwauling of the 'anti-racist' lobby, both at street level and in the media, suddenly falls silent, however, when it is a case of Whites falling victim to the violence of non-Whites. The vicious stabbing to death of young Paul Carter in Walsall by a gang of mainly Asian youths was greeted with total silence in the national news media, despite the anger of the town's British majority at this savage murder of one of their community.

Local newspapers and media, like local politicians, were desperate to play down any racial overtones in this case. The media stuck to the line that Paul had been attacked solely in an attempt to steal his jacket. But the lad had been knifed over and over again by the gang, rendering the jacket useless. If robbery was the only motive of the attack, this is hard to explain.

Meanwhile, in a cynical 'show-biz' ploy, Walsall's political establishment closed ranks in order to head off the rage of the local people. Councillors got together with leaders of the 'ethnic' communities for a publicly staged 'peace' meeting. No voice was allowed to be present to express the anger of the British majority in the area, over whose heads the town's Tory, Labour and Liberal politicos acted out what was widely seen as an empty farce.

The white view only got a look in when the British National Party marched through the Bloxwich area of the town, from which Paul Carter came, in honour of his memory last month.

NEARLY BLINDED

Elsewhere, attacks on white people by non-Whites are being minimised and hushed up by other methods. Floorlayer Kevin Loftus was nearly blinded when a gang of four Blacks threw a paving slab at him following an argument in a Nottingham chip shop. He had asked the four to stop blocking the doorway to the shop so that people could get in and out. When they followed him inside, making to attack him, the owner ordered them off his premises. But they waited in ambush in a doorway up the street, waylaid Mr. Loftus and hit him with the slab from behind.

KEVIN LOFTUS
Lost the sight of one eye after being hit by slab thrown by black gang

As a result of the assult, Mr. Loftus lost the sight of one eye and was left with impaired vision in the other.

Whilst saying that these particular black assailants clearly had an ''attitude problem'', police dismissed the attack as simply ''another sickening example of mindless violence in the city.''

This turn of phrase was seized upon by the local newspaper, which headlined its report of the attack: ''Police blast mindless violence.'' It seems that the strategy of the establishment and its propagandists is to write off any black-on-white violence as some sort of motiveless act of God for which no explanation can be found, about which nothing can be done, and which British folk, unlike immigrants, are just going to have to put up with. On the other hand, every white-on-black assault is eagerly seized upon by politicians and media as fresh evidence of an upsurge in 'racial attacks'.

But one place where things have gone too far for this is Halifax, in Yorkshire, on whose problems we have previously reported. According to police figures, the town is now the worst area in West Yorkshire for racial attacks on Whites, and the local constabulary has incorporated the town into its official survey of such attacks on that basis.

Between March and May alone, in the St. John's area, no less than 20 incidents were reported. What the local press in Halifax calls ''disturbing statistics'' show that the town has one of the highest levels of racial crime in the country.

VICTIMS TO BLAME!

But whilst admitting that native British now walk in the neighbourhood in fear, the Halifax Courier, by verbal sleight of hand, seeks to put the blame on them as much as on their assailants. The Courier's leading article for May 12th goes out of its way to make excuses for the Asian thugs, although it admits them to be responsible for the violence.

The article quotes the so-called 'revenge' theory, according to which Asians are supposed to be getting their own back for earlier alleged abuse by Whites. Further on, it speaks of the ''wider Asian community,'' which it describes as ''law-abiding,'' and claims that this community ''suffers continually from the activities of the thugs in its midst.''

But, commenting on this, one Halifax man who spoke to a British Nationalist reporter said: ''So there you have it. As far as they're concerned, even when we're the ones being attacked it's all got to be our fault, and they're always the poor, put-upon victims.'' He added: ''If they're that law-abiding and as anxious to help the police to stop it as they say they are, why don't their community leaders and their priests up at the mosque just call the young thugs to order?''

NO EXCUSE

It is not thought that recent victims of attacks — like Miss Gillian Holdcroft, who had her cheek and chin-bones horrifically smashed with a brick by a gang of these thugs who attacked her on a bus, or the barmaid described by police as ''a perfectly innocent young woman going about her business'' and who was sexually assaulted by four Asians on her way to work — are likely to regard their attackers as having any sort of excuse.

GILLIAN HOLDCROFT
Sustained horrific injuries

In general, British people have now had it up to the back teeth being victimised by immigrant thugs on their own city streets, then being told either that nothing can be done about it or that it is somehow at least partly their own fault — and then seeing immigrants who allege victimisation by Whites being promoted to the status of pampered darlings for whose benefit politicians, press and police will bend over backwards and pull out all the stops.

Undermining Britain's defences

'POLITICAL CORRECTNESS' STARTS TO GET A FOOTHOLD IN THE ARMED FORCES

MOVES are now afoot to impose the ragbag of pro-ethnic minority, pro-queer, loony feminist and other watered down Marxist ideas and attitudes known as 'political correctness' on Britain's armed forces.

This was the message as a top-level army enquiry last month swung into action with far-reaching demands for the rules and regulations governing the forces to be turned upside down for the benefit of Blacks serving in the ranks. Members of the enquiry wanted Defence Secretary Malcolm Riffkind to take special measures to ''clamp down on racists,'' saying he would be ''failing in his duty'' if he did not.

They wanted soldiers and NCOs to be instructed about the Race Relations Act as a matter of urgent priority, and a code of practice on race relations to be drawn up with instructions on 'racial language'. They also wanted Queen's Regulations to be reviewed and rules on disciplinary hearings to be examined.

STORM IN A TEACUP

This far-reaching programme, which is thought likely to be in line with Mr. Riffkind's own views, came out of a storm-in-a-teacup case involving allegations that a black soldier, Pte. Anthony Evans, was bullied whilst serving in the Royal Regiment of Wales, and that his race seemed to some extent to have come into it. Evans told the board of enquiry examining the matter that he had been beaten and victimised by fellow soldiers in barrack-room kangaroo courts, and had had his career blocked.

But the enquiry's findings hardly bore out an image of racially motivated persecution at the hands of his comrades. Many of his claims were rejected, and whilst conceding that there seemed to be a ''kernel of truth in Evans' allegations'' the board's final report nevertheless stated that ''the fundamental truth seems to have been embellished.''

There was certainly strong evidence that kangaroo courts were held. But Evans was not the only victim and race was not the reason.

As the Army Legal Corps board made plain, the 'courts' were partly to punish people for errors. Evans was regarded as not up to scratch and letting his mates down.

Whilst the 'courts' certainly went over the top a bit, probably breaching army regulations and civil law on assault, Evans was at one point threatened with a beating not because of his colour but because, as the board concluded, his colleagues thought him untidy.

It seems that when it came to verbal abuse Evans' race only came into the matter in the same way that personal remarks can come into the abuse that any recruit is likely to suffer from drill sergeants, instructors and fellow soldiers in the course of his training.

One fellow soldier said that Evans was picked on only because of his untidiness, and that whilst he was called such things as 'nigger' and 'coon' this was always in jest and never intended to be malicious. His former platoon sergeant Roy Jones, BEM, said that he quite possibly used terms like 'black twat', 'little nigger boy' and 'rubber lips' in speaking to Evans. But, as he explained to an SIB (Special Investigations Branch) officer, dispatched specially to Hong Kong, where Sgt. Jones was serving at the time of the enquiry, this was purely a motivator. Sgt. Jones said that he would use strong, and possibly personal, language to any other soldier if he wasn't moving fast enough to carry out orders.

COMMON PRACTICE

Anyone who has served in the forces will know that it is quite common practice for NCOs, sergeants and warrant officers to refer to men as 'Scotch git', 'Yorkshire tyke', 'lump of lard' or 'beanpole', depending on ethnic or regional background or physical characteristics. This of course has always been accepted as part of the verbal rough and tumble of service life and seldom resented. The board of enquiry in this case, however, did not explain how Evans' case is so special that it should be made the occasion for turning Queen's Regulations upside down and inside out. At all events, Evans did not, on the face of it, seem to have been of the material out of which good soldiers are made.

This case would seem rather to fit in with an across-the-board attempt by the powers that be to transform the British Army into something quite different from what it has always been. Tory armed forces minister Archie Hamilton late last year was pressing with all the fervour that might have been expected of the Labour Party's more fanatical negrophiles for Blacks and Asians to be encouraged into the army, especially the Brigade of Guards. Mr. Major's Government is said to regard the lack of immigrants in the Guards as especially 'embarrassing'.

LOCAL ESTABLISHMENT HYSTERIA GREETS THE B.N.P. IN READING

HIGH EMOTION has greeted the appearance of the British National Party in Reading. Back in May, the party's fledgling local unit held a highly successful paper-sale in the Caversham district of the town. This was the first time nationalists had appeared on the streets in the Reading area in any serious way for over a decade.

The event caused quite a stir. It even gave the leaders of the fanatically pro-ethnic minority lunatic left-wing council and the local media something to talk about for quite a while after-meantime.

On the Wednesday before the Day of Action an enthusiastic regional meeting was held in Caversham at which residents of the suburbs leafletted the following Saturday were present. A number signed up there and then as BNP members.

COUNCIL GOES FRANTIC

Faced with the BNP challenge on the streets, Reading's ruling politicians showed themselves in their true colours. Council leaders went howling out of our town!'' No, we are not making this up – this gentleman, who from his name obviously has roots a long way from Berkshire, is actually speaking of ''our town'' as if he had more right to be there than the native-born British people of the BNP!

The council also went out of its way to threaten its tenants with eviction from their homes for 'racism' – presumably in the event of their showing support for the BNP.

TORY JOINS ACT

In delightful agreement with the Labour majority on the council, and fully in line with the policy of her party at national level, the leader of the local Tory group, Councillor Pauline Palmer said: ''We are totally united in this decision and in getting these people out and keeping them out of Reading.''

No councillor of any political stripe was forthcoming with any explanation as to why, in their view, the BNP, a lawful political party that, just like any other, seeks to promote itself by way of the ballot box, should not be allowed to compete in the democratic process.

It could well be that all of the local politicos suffer from a guilty conscience. As if by mutual agreement, they've maintained a deafening silence about Reading's real problems for years. In some places the town has degenerated into a nightmare. The Oxford Road ghetto district has witnessed hideous crimes of violence. In addition, multi-racialism has run rampant, with the controlling Labour Party concerned only to buy minority votes at the expense of the majority.

Unable to beat Labour, the Tories have opted to join them in this game. They too now seem more interested in the votes of the minorities than in the views of the British majority.

Many ordinary British folk in the town now feel disfranchised and angry. Councillor Palmer may say she wants to keep the BNP out, but in fact she's too late. The BNP is in Reading already, and means to stay. And it's ther because of the mess she and her council colleagues have helped to make of a once decent British town.

The fact is, as Regional Organiser John Morse told the Evening Post, the BNP has a growing following in the town and in its activities there is responding to this support.

PRESS SOUNDS ALARM!
These are just a few of the headlines that appeared in the local papers following the start of the BNP campaign in Reading to the local press with high-decibel demands for police action against what they called 'racists' in general and the BNP in particular. In a full council meeting a motion was passed condemning the appearance of the party in the area.

Labour leader, Councillor Michael Orton, called for ''firm and immediate action'' to be taken to stop the BNP getting what he called a ''toe-hold.'' The borough's chief executive Sylvie Pierce was told to set up an urgent meeting with Reading's senior police officer.

According to the Evening Post, which banner-headlined the BNP's visit to Reading on its front page, this was to ''stamp out racist and fascist activity in the town.''

HIS TOWN!

Also joining the hue and cry, perhaps in an attempt to browbeat the white community that still makes up the majority of Reading's population, was the head of the local Council for Racial Equality and Deputy Mayor Rajinder Sophal, who was quoted by the press as saying to the BNP: ''Stay wards.

But this was nothing to the hysteria that followed a second major activity. Supported and reinforced by the BNP's Hampshire and Berkshire regional organisation, a thirty-strong team of party activists bearing Union Jacks leafletted key areas of the town on Saturday, the 11th July.

These included Caversham, Emmer Green, Tilehurst and Whitley. The feeling of the party, both in Reading itself and at regional level, is that candidates could well be fielded in these or other parts of the town in the 1993 local elections – and perhaps sooner if councillors come up for re-election in suitable wards in the

JUST WHO DO THESE PEOPLE THINK THEY ARE?

THE REACTION by local politicians to the recent British National Party recruiting campaign in Reading is fairly typical of what is happening all around Britain wherever the party begins to manifest a presence.

Phrases like ''Stay out of town!'' and talk of ''stamping out'' BNP activity amount to language which most reasonable people associate with totalitarian politics, and yet here we have politicians in a supposedly 'democratic' country talking of the BNP as if it were some sort of illegal and criminal organisation. Indeed, one of Reading Council's actions on hearing that the party was campaigning in the town was to go running to the police demanding that it be stopped!

Just who the hell do these people think they are?

The fact is that the BNP is a lawful political party which has as much right to spread its views in Reading (or any other British town) as any of the other parties. If people do not like those views, there is a simple course for them to take: they should not join or support the BNP. We defend their right not to do either.

We only ask that these folk of other political persuasions recognise OUR right to express our views, and let the people decide who is correct.

By demanding that the BNP should not be permitted to be active in an area, whether it be Reading or anywhere else, its opponents are demonstrating one thing very clearly: they are frightened. Why?

AROUND THE KINGDOM...

GILLINGHAM

The Medway town of Gillingham in Kent played host to a highly successful Day of Action on Saturday, the 25th July. This event was organised by the BNP's Kent Regional Organiser Michael Easter. Hundreds of leaflets were distributed to eager shoppers in the high street, and a busy paper-sale was also held, with Union Flags flying to announce the BNP's presence. Following this, many hundreds more leaflets were distributed to houses in the surrounding area. This was the first stage in Kent Region's campaign in Gillingham, which will lead up to next year's May county council elections.

BLACKPOOL

For some time, the BNP has had a small group in Blackpool organised for low-key activities. Now, however, we can report that activities in this world-famous Lacashire resort will be dramatically stepped up. The local unit has been reorganised, and a new local PO box has been acquired. More and more propaganda items are being distributed, with Blackpool set to become a thriving base for the BNP in the North West of England.

BELFAST
BNP leafletters busy in street

BEDFORDSHIRE

The area north of London and south of the East Midlands, comprising the counties of Northamptonshire, Bedfordshire, Hertfordshire and North Buckinghamshire, have become one of the major growth areas for the BNP recently. The inspiration for this growth has largely come from the party's well organised and very active Milton Keynes branch.

The most recent addition to the BNP's strength in the area came with the formation of a new group in Luton & Dunstable. Richard Edmonds, the party's National Activities Organiser, spoke at the first meeting of the group on the 21st July, and a local PO box has already been opened up. Local Organiser Andrew Gush has already gained widespread local publicity for the new group.

STOKE-ON-TRENT

The BNP's Stoke-on-Trent group, which has been in existence for a little while, has recently expanded activities considerably as a result of recruiting more activists. There are now regular sales of British Nationalist in the city, and warm local response is reported.

BELFAST

The Ulster unit of the BNP held a very successful Day of Action in Belfast on the 25th July, in which thousands of the party's 'Stand by Ulster' and 'Hang child murderers' leaflets were given out. This activity was carried out yet again in the south of the city. The unit has started an energetic recruitment drive in Northern Ireland's capital, and has already begun to attract publicity in the local media. The unit would like to thank all Belfast supporters for helping out in the Day of Action.

Special Appeal

Further to our announcement last month of the opening of a British National Party Post-Election Fund with a target of £3,000, it has been found that the party must raise a figure consideraly in excess of this to meet a number of expenses arising not only from the general election but from other requirements, including the need to replace the BNP motor van which has been smashed up by opponents and to take on additional staff to share the mounting burden of work.

BNP Chairman John Tyndall has started this fund with a personal donation of £500, and has appealed to party supporters to follow his example to the maximum of their ability. Donations to PO Box 117, Welling, Kent DA16 3DW.

Smash the IRA!
The mask of IRA evil
Innocent victims of the IRA
Since 1969, the IRA has killed up to 2,000 people and maimed thousands more in brutal and cowardly attacks in Ulster, Mainland Britain and Europe. Over 400 British soldiers have been murdered by these sick, sadistic monsters, who claim to be fighting for a 'free' Ireland. The truth is that the majority of Ulster folk (75 per cent) reject the IRA and wish to remain British. The IRA thugs, backed up by their political wing Sinn Fein, know this and resort to terrible atrocities to achieve their evil ambitions.
But in Britain today, the Tory, Labour and Liberal Democrat parties show nothing but appeasement when confronted with IRA terror - forever coming up with 'peace initiatives', which concede a little more each each time to republican demands, instead of taking firm measures to wipe out the terrorists once and for all.
Our policy, by contrast, is: (1) To give a firm guarantee that Northern Ireland will forever remain British, with no concessions to republicanism; (2) To declare all-out war on the IRA and give our security forces full authorisation to wipe these terrorists out - by all means necessary!

Tory sell out on Euro-union
BRITAIN'S ELEVENTH HOUR
GREAT BRITAIN
Born 1707; RIP 1992
WHAT 1992 WILL MEAN FOR BRITAIN:-
● Complete loss of control over our economy and the pound eventually replaced by a European currency
● Loss of political sovereignty by 1997, with Britain's Government being reduced to a country council and foreigners making our laws
● The scrapping of all remaining import controls and the complete collapse of British industry as cheap foreign goods flood our markets, leading to even higher unemployment
● The scrapping of what little border controls we now have and more immigrants pouring in to add to thse already here
The British National Party is the only party committed to pulling Britain out of Europe and achieving full British independence!

For our survival...
STOP THE DEFENCE CUTS!
LEST WE FORGET
This man died for you!
Recently, the Government decided to reduce dangerously the size of our armed forces over the next four years, with no less than 50,000 44,000 of its finest soldiers, and this will dramatically erode its ability to fight off any aggressor, such as it did in the Falklands war.
The Government proclaims that we are now living in a safer world. We disagree! In fact the world is becoming ever more dangerous - as events both in the Middle East and Europe now demonstrate. There is no reason to believe that British forces may not, at a moment's notice, be called upon to defend our interests somewhere.
After the appalling cuts now being planned, Britain will be left almost unarmed and totally unable to defend itself or its vital interests anywhere.
The traitors in Whitehall who are responsible for this disastrous policy must be stopped now!
The British National Party is the only party in this country committed to maintaining strong armed forces and keeping Britain properly defended.

Stop unemployment...
BAN
IMPORTS!
OH RIGHT! British miners became latest victims of the Government's 'international free market' policy
This year, as in previous years, the Government is allowing billions of pounds worth of cheaply priced foreign goods to flood the British market and exacerbate unemployment - in part because British industries cannot pay their workers the low wages that are paid by many of their foreign competitors.
And even worse is to come. As from 1992, with the advent of the European Single Market, the few remaining import barriers we had are coming down. This policy will put even more British workers on the dole.
There is only one way to prevent these things happening and to defend the jobs of British workers: We must place a progressive ban on imports of foreign-made manufactured goods, coal and all other items that can be produced in Britain, and we must build up British industries to fill the gap. This is the way to full employment, to the recovery of British industry and to national prosperity.
Can such a policy work? It has worked - in Japan, the most successful industrial nation in the modern world. We can make it work for ourselves too!

ASIAN EXTREMISM:
Our coming disaster
Islamic leader Kalim 'Mad Doc' Siddiqui
● The leader of the extreme Moslems in this country, Dr. Kalim Siddiqui says that Moslems must have their own state within Britain, adhering to the laws of their parliament and ignoring ours! This is in deliberate defiance of our Constitution.
● He has called white western society 'The sick man of the modern world'. In London in 1990, 20,000 of his Moslem supporters burned our national flag and attacked our police. In the Gulf War, Siddiqui's newly formed Moslem parliament threw its total support behind Iraq!
To combat this growing threat to the safety of British society we say: Stop immigration! Start repatriation! Vote British National Party!

Defend Rights for Whites in Halifax!

IN THE LAST ISSUE of British Nationalist we promised that the British National Party would be in the forefront of defending the white community in Halifax, Yorkshire, which has been under vicious attack from certain sections of the Asian population. Since then, thousands of special leaflets have gone out, as well as copies of British Nationalist, and they have produced a terrific response from the locals. The BNP has now been asked to hold a 'Rights for Whites' march in the town to provide a visible and legitimate outlet for the white community's justifiable grievances. The purpose of this march is to show the authorities that the good people of Halifax are not, and will not be, forgotten. Through the BNP, the white community will find its voice.

This march, to be held on Saturday, the 15th August, will be a very important event. All nationalists are urged to attend!

East End by-election

AN ASIAN Labour councillor has resigned from his seat in the overwhelmingly Bangladeshi Spitalfields Ward in the East London borough of Tower Hamlets, resulting in a by-election. The borough has one of the highest percentages of immigrants in Britain, and Spitalfields Ward probably has a higher proportion of immigrants in it than any other ward in the borough. Nevertheless, there are still several hundred white people in the area, and therefore the BNP has decided to contest this election.

As far as the authorities are concerned, these British people do not exist. However, there are no no-go areas for the BNP, and we will be fighting for our people wherever they may be.

The BNP candidate has already been selected. He is Ken Walsh, who contested the same ward in 1990 and gained a highly creditable 3.6 percent of the vote (or nearly 17 percent of the white vote). Ken followed this up with the excellent result in neighbouring St. Peter's Ward in a by-election later in the same year, when he polled 12.1 per-cent (or around 18 per-cent of the white vote). Clearly, given the make-up of the electorate in Spitalfields, it is highly unlikely that Ken will better the result gained in St. Peters. However, we are convinced we will scoop up a sizeable proportion of the white votes this time round.

The BNP will be running an energetic campaign. Help is needed, so — lend a hand! Volunteers please contact the BNP information line (081 316 4721) for details. Polling day is on Thursday, August 27th.

The highlight of the BNP campaign will be a public election rally held on the Monday, August 24th (see details on the left of this page). Keep the date free — this will be a major event you will not want to miss!

heavy industries of Britain as a whole. As such, it's a tragedy for us all, from one end of the United Kingdom to the other, injuring the strength of the whole nation.

Only a British National Party Government in control of the United Kingdom from Land's End to John O'Groats will have the power to put a stop to the abandonment of British industry and British workers to their present fate. Only such a government will take control of Britain's money machine so as to make it work primarily for the nation — as the servant of industry rather than, at present, for its own private profit alone.

Until such a government is in office, such abuses as the great Clydesdale Chinese takeaway are likely to go on.

and payment would apply.

If these people wanted to go to camps in the summer and sit around fires and enjoy music, they would be allowed to do so. But the camps would be held on public land or on private land appropriately rented, with insurance against damage guaranteed to the owners out of their earnings. The camps would be carefully supervised. Military discipline would prevail. There would be regular morning parades and inspections, and everything would be kept spotlessly tidy and clean. Camp fire music would exclude the beats of the jungle and would consist largely of classics and folk songs, including a good portion with a patriotic flavour. The national flag would be raised in the morning and lowered at night, while all campers would stand to attention.

No, we are not joking. This is exactly what we would do with people of this kind. And they and the nation would be the better for it!

But of course in the weak, sloppy, 'liberal' Britain of today this will never happen. We will continue to tolerate these pests invading private land. We will continue to let them get high on drugs. And we will continue to pay them their social security tribute.

Isn't it great to live in a free democracy!

UNDERMINING BRITAIN'S DEFENCES

indulging their perversions, the latter are no longer to be treated as an offence against military law and hence to be tried by court martial.

It remains to be seen if this bowing of the knee by the Tories to the 'gay' lobby, with which Mr. Major was so anxious to curry favour at the general election, is the thin end of the wedge.

At all events, many will find it hard to see what this new pandering to minority whims, reaching now into the very heart of the armed forces, has to do with making Britain's defences more efficient — which is the true duty, as most normal British people will see it, of the nation's military authorities and their political chiefs.

Many of the old county regiments, which recruited almost from father to son, preserving the traditional esprit de corps, sense of community and national and local patriotism that lie at the root of the British Army's pride, discipline and toughness, have already been axed by Mr. Major's Government.

It remains to be seen if our armed forces are now to be colonised by the minorities, as has happened to the US forces, parts of which give the appearance of armed tribes of negroes commanded by an officer corps of lesbians.

Significantly perhaps, Mr. Major has been at the forefront of world leaders in demanding that armed forces be put at the disposal of the UN for the enforcement of President Bush's 'New World Order'. Possibly this is the role that he and his Government now have in mind for our forces rather than the defence of Britain, and for this role they are seeking to remould them.

THE NATION'S CRISIS AND OUR ANSWER

igence and ability, but above all superior in the strength of character out of which comes the will to govern.

Second, we must place at the disposal of those in office the power to govern effectively — in particular the power to override the many sectional interests that today paralyse government, most of all in the economic sector.

Third, we must make a thorough reappraisal of the prerogatives and responsibilities of government. Government in Britain must become something to which we can look, not only to attend to daily administration of the nation's affairs, but to take the lead in a complete rebirth of the national character and spirit, a national regeneration that reaches into every compartment and corner of British life — not the least part of which will be to breed and educate a new type of citizen, living in accordance with a code of discipline, duty, patriotism, civic responsibility and national pride.

In the case of the young in particular, government must see it as its task not only to provide the necessary facilities of schooling in the basic academic subjects but to provide institutions which will supervise the development of young people in every facet of character building. We must do away with the supposition that the nation's political leadership has no responsibility for the direction of young lives in leisure time, that young folk may be left to drift aimlessly into pursuits degenerative to mind and body. The nation's young must in fact be firmly protected from the hundredfold modern influences, made available by science and technology and by the profit-hungry interests that dominate the modern industry of popular entertainment and 'culture', which produce the physical and spiritual poisons so alarmingly visible everywhere today. We must indeed be prepared to introduce an element of regimentation into young people's lives to prepare the ground-work for future citizenship — a status which should not be conferred on all and sundry at a certain age as if by divine right, but which should be earned by proof of fitness for the responsibilities it entails. In the case of young men this would most certainly incorporate compulsory military training, instituted by a revival of the national service that was obligatory for my generation, and from which all of us emerged the better men.

REVOLUTIONARY CREED

This concept of the duties and rights of citizenship is a planet away from the libertarian creed of the Thatcher era, according to which the individual was a sovereign entity in his own right, to be left alone to compete in the jungle of 'market forces' in accordance with an ethic of selfishness and greed. It is a concept involving changes in our society that are nothing less than revolutionary, and they are changes that many may not yet be ready to accept at the present time, changes that today's political conscience will instantly designate as 'extreme'.

But it must be understood that Britain is now in a situation of extreme crisis that does not permit ordinary remedial measures. As our front-page headline this month states clearly, this nation is falling apart. British society is disintegrating rapidly around us. We head the European league table for divorce and for one-parent families. We have a crime rate that is getting completely out of hand. Our towns and cities are rent by civil war. Our economic superstructure is collapsing in ruins. We have got to understand that the old politics are simply inadequate to cope with our problems. We face the choice: national renewal or national death. Ours is an age of decision the like of which probably has not been known in the long march of British history. If we shirk the decisions necessary to provide this nation with a future, we will have displayed a cowardice for which our grandchildren will have every right to curse us

BACK ON THE STREETS IN STRENGTH!

BNP march in Walsall

FOR THE FIRST TIME for more than a decade, the British National Party last month took to the streets of a provincial town in strength to stage a march. Throughout the 1980s, the BNP has held many static rallies, both in and out of doors, up and down the country. In recent years these have been growing stronger, both in the numbers attending and in the public interest they have generated.

But on Saturday, the 18th July, it had been decided that it was high time the party should be seen once again to be on the march outside London, standing up in forceful and dramatic style for the British people, this time in Walsall, in the West Midlands.

A column of nearly 300 BNP members and supporters weaved its way through the streets of the Bloxwich district of the town. The event was held in commemoration of the death of a local man, Paul Carter, who was brutally stabbed to death by an Asian gang in the centre of Walsall a short time previously (see article on page 4: 'What about these racial attacks?'). Only one of Paul Carter's assailants seems to have been apprehended; others are said to have fled to Pakistan. It is not thought that the authorities will make any strenuous efforts to get the latter extradited back to Britain to face trial.

The march was also a protest against the violation of ordinary British people's rights in their own country under the multi-racial new order that their rulers have forced on them.

Local police sought to place extraordinary obstacles in the way of the Walsall activity, which was held to give voice to the growing anger of the town's British majority. On the pretext of upholding 'public order', they even refused the BNP the right to carry their Union Jacks on flagpoles — a move without precedent in our memory.

In fact, as must have been known to the senior officers in command, there barely existed any chance of disorder. According to reports received on the day, opposition was confined to a pathetic collection of left-wing student riff-raff, filled out with a smattering of ethnic minority members probably not numbering more than 100.

A subsequent report of what happened on the day, given in the local newspaper, made it plain that this pitiable rabble, exhibiting itself under the banners of the self-styled 'Anti-Nazi League', had in any case already been dispersed after meeting in the centre of Walsall before the BNP activity had begun. It would seem that it had never been allowed to get anywhere near Bloxwich.

A SECTION OF THE MARCH
Flags are being held by the corners because police forbade them being carried on poles

As one speaker pointed out at the rally which concluded the BNP march, we British are being dictated to in this way in our own land in times when Sikh immigrants in Britain are officially permitted to parade in public not just with flagpoles but with ceremonial swords!

In addition, police laid down a route for the procession that avoided the main shopping area of Bloxwich. It is believed that this was done to stop the large numbers of local people waiting in the town centre pubs to swell the numbers on the march, which they were expecting to pass that way.

Nevertheless, as the BNP column went through local residential areas, chanting slogans in support of rights for Whites, demanding an end to immigration and a start to repatriation and singing 'Rule Britannia' and other patriotic songs, the mood of patriotic fervour generated by the marchers seemed contagious. Householders and their families gave cheers and thumbs-up as the column went past their homes. Quite apart from other considerations, the march was a definite step forward for the BNP's resurgent West Midlands unit.

Speaking at the concluding rally, party leader John Tyndall said that until then the West Midlands had not been one of the party's strongest areas. ''But from today,'' he added, ''that is going to change.''

Another thing seems certain. The mood and spirit of Saturday, the 18th July, among both the BNP's membership and the growing numbers of ordinary Britons who agree with the party's policies, are not going to go away, no matter what methods of deceit and repression are adopted by the powers that be in their vain efforts to silence popular protest against their failing system.

'Rentamob' fails to stop revisionist seminar

AN excellent revisionist seminar was held in Central London on Saturday, July 4th. This event was organised jointly by the British National Party and an ad-hoc committee of revisionist historians, and proved to be a huge success. Due to the fact that the historian David Irving, currently much in the news because of his involvement in the translation of diaries claimed to have been written by Dr. Joseph Goebbels, was scheduled to be present as a speaker, the meeting attracted intense media interest.

Earlier in the day, various Zionist and extreme left-wing groups held a demonstration outside Mr. Irving's flat in Mayfair. This ragbag of misfits was then allowed by the police to march through the West End to the revisionist conference facility near Regents Park, where some 250 people had assembled to listen to the proceedings. Clearly the anti-revisionists are running scared and are desperate to prevent the revisionist message being heard. Unfortunately for them, all their activities achieved was to advertise it yet further!

The first speakers at the seminar were American lawyers Kirk Lyons, who shortly beforehand had addressed two BNP meetings in Scotland and Yorkshire, and Sam Dickson, who had also spoken at the Scottish meeting. Mr. Irving arrived half way through the meeting to give a concluding talk. This was followed by a question time chaired by another American lawyer Martin O'Toole. The three Americans are part of an organisation called CAUSE, which has been set up to co-ordinate legal action in defence of white patriots all over the world.

When the seminar ended, the 'rent-amob' outside, who had seen the calibre of the audience and stewards (most of whom had been supplied by the BNP), decided to make themselves scarce. This great day finished off with a highly enjoyable buffet and social.

The initiative in the propaganda battle over historical revisionism clearly lies with the nationalist movement. The media have been forced to report the arguments supporting revisionism, and the extreme left has been impotent to prevent this happening.

REVISIONIST SPEAKER
Kirk Lyons addresses seminar

'RENTAMOB' ASSEMBLES OUTSIDE
The picket boards saying 'Stop the Nazis' are of course indicative of the tendency of these people to label 'nazi' anyone who disagrees with them. In fact, historical revisionists of the kind attending the meeting come from across a wide range of the political spectrum, being people who are only interested in the truth.

What we stand for

- The establishment of a government of national unity that will put an end to nationally divisive party warfare; the return of leadership and statesmanship to British affairs.
- An end to immigration and a start to repatriation.
- British withdrawal from the Common Market
- The disbanding of the multi-racial Commonwealth and its replacement by a new Commonwealth of self-governing white states.
- British ownership and control of British industry and resources.
- Protection of British industry by the selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.
- An end to the financial swindle that causes inflation and slump, and its replacement by a sane and fair financial system that will give the people the purchasing power to buy the goods they produce.
- The subordination of the power of the City to the power of government, and the harnessing of the City to the needs of British industry.
- The regeneration of British farming, with the object of achieving the maximum possible self-sufficiency in food production.
- Rejection of both the poll tax and its substitute, the new 'property tax', and a return to the old rates system, though with fairer rebates allowing for differences in income and in the numbers occupying properties.
- A healthy environment for a healthy people — the protection of our countryside and an end to the architectural disfigurement of our towns and cities.
- Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty.
- A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and the sacking of 'trendy' teachers.
- An alternative defence strategy: withdrawal from NATO, closure of all foreign military and air bases in Britain, the strengthening of Britain's defences and a position of armed neutrality.
- An end to overseas aid and the allocation of the money saved to the financing of repatriation and greater help for the needy at home.
- The crushing of the IRA, the termination of the Anglo-Irish Agreement and firm support for the loyalist majority in Northern Ireland.
- Repeal of the laws permitting homosexuality and abortion (except where the latter is the result of rape or necessary on medical grounds), the wiping out of AIDS and a return to healthy moral values aimed at strengthening the family and community.
